

Brad Cornell is Southwest Florida Policy Associate for both Audubon Western Everglades and Audubon Florida, a joint position he has held since summer, 2005, and for the regional organization since 2001. He works on land use, wetlands, coastal habitats, and Western Everglades restoration to protect and recover imperiled species, especially the Florida Panther, migratory and nesting shore and seabirds, Corkscrew's Wood Storks, and Marco Island's Burrowing Owls. He has degrees from Oberlin College and the University of Texas at Austin and played trombone for the Naples Philharmonic Orchestra for ten years prior to joining Audubon. Brad, his partner Martha, and their two adult children enjoy hiking and camping in Florida, North Carolina and Michigan.